RESULTS FOR 28TH FEBRUARY 2000

36 CHCs covered 38 hospitals in London, Kent, Surrey, Sussex, Hertfordshire, Newcastle and Birmingham.

LONGEST WAITS IN FEBRUARY

The longest trolley wait in A&E was recorded at Epsom General Hospital. Mid Surrey CHC reported that a 63-year-old female with Cellulitis had been on a trolley for over 32 hours waiting for a hospital bed to become free.

The longest bed wait in an A & E department was at West Middlesex University Hospital. Hounslow CHC reported that a 33-year-old female patient with asthma had waited for over 36 hours to be admitted to a hospital ward.

The total number of patients in A&E departments recorded in February was 722, of whom 49 (6.78%) had waited ten hours or more and 19 people had waited for 20 hours or more. The total number of patients who had waited four hours or more was 258(35.73%).

Over 70s

25 people aged 70 and over had been in the Accident and Emergency departments in excess of 10 hours, and of these 14 were on trolleys. At William Harvey Hospital in Ashford a male patient aged 101 who had collapsed, arrived at the hospital at 6.55am was still on a trolley, waiting for a hospital bed at 4.30pm. The patient had been on a trolley in casualty for over 9 hours.

HOSPITAL NEWS ROUND UP

BROMLEY HOSPITAL

Janis Bryan, Chief Officer from Bromley CHC reported that the information for Casualty Watch was supplied the next morning by Bromley Hospital Trust.

There had been confusion on the day of the casualty when CHC members were told that the department was too busy and therefore they could not conduct the Watch.

The excuse given by the Trust was that the Manager who knew about Casualty Watch had been detained elsewhere, and staff in A & E did not know the protocol!

NORTHWICK PARK HOSPITAL

Joe Grenfell from Harrow CHC reported that there was a problem with obtaining blood results from the lab which slowed down 'decisions' about patient care.

ASHFORD HOSPITAL, MIDDLESEX

David Revie from North West Surrey CHC reported that a survey carried out by the Ambulance Service 'Emergency Pressures Management System' in Surrey found that ambulance quota for most Surrey hospitals was 100%, but at Ashford Hospital was 150%, the highest in the area. Ambulances were being diverted elsewhere.

MAIDSTONE HOSPITAL

Robin Kenworthy from Maidstone and Malling CHC reported that patients were kept on 'trolley beds' for 4 hours then 'considered' for an inpatient bed.

All the patients who were able, had had lunch, and supper was to be brought down at 17.30 hours.

KENT AND SUSSEX HOSPITAL

Victor Clements from Tunbridge Wells CHC reported that only 2 doctors were on duty and thus patients were waiting to be seen after the 2 hours maximum wait.

OTHER NEWS

The Evening Standard ran a full page on casualty watch waits on 2nd March 2000 (page IX). Jo Revill the Evening Standard Journalist researched this piece carefully and found that an 82-year-old man reportedly lying on a trolley for 39 hours and 59 minutes was in fact on a bed. However hospital later stated that the man had in fact been discharged earlier that day!

The Daily Mail carried a report on Casualty Watch on the 2nd March 2000 (page X) which they claimed was a scoop from Liam Fox MP, the Conservative Party front bench spokesperson on health. The CHC has complained to the Daily Mail about their false claims of ownership of Casualty Watch data – which of course is public data once checked by the CHCs.

INFORMATION RECEIVED FROM EMERGENCY BED SERVICE AND LONDON AMBULANCE SERVICE

Information was received from the Emergency Bed Service (EBS) regarding restrictions in force and medically refereed cases and the report can be found on page VIII

Four Hospitals: Ealing, Kingston, Northwick Park and West Middlesex were under heavy pressure and were receiving Medically Refereed Cases only from local GPs. One of these, Kingston had 42 people waiting.

The information received from the London Ambulance Service (LAS) stated that they had no records of any hospitals being closed to 'blue lights' ambulances between 16.00 and midnight on Monday, 28th February 2000. However there were many delays.

THE MARCH CASUALTY WATCH

The March Casualty Watch will take place on Monday 27th March 2000 at 4.30pm. Please could results be faxed to SOUTHWARK CHC on 0171 277 1805 or 0171 277 2297 as soon as possible after collecting the data

The Top 20 Waits are compiled at 10am on the Tuesday morning immediately following Casualty Watch. Data to be included in this compilation will need to be sent to us by 9.30am on the Tuesday. The Rapid Distribution of the top 20 ensures that the effectiveness and reliability of Casualty Watch is sustained.

All completed forms will need to have reached Southwark by the end of Tuesday 28th March 2000 to be included in the main results. Please fax from the Casualty Department. They are always happy to oblige.

Top twenty waits are issued in a draft form until 5pm on the Tuesday following the Casualty Watch to enable CHCs to correct and intervene immediately with the Trust and Health Authority, if unacceptable times are discovered.

Note

Once Casualty Watch data has been checked and corrected by the CHC doing the survey, it becomes public information.

Man, 93, waited for 16 hours on hospital trolley

by JO REVILL
Health Correspondent

A MAN of 93 waited on a trolley for 16 hours at Charing Cross Hospital, the biggest hospital in west London, before being admitted for treatment to injuries to his face.

The man was one of a number of elderly patients in London, many in their seventies or older, who were treated on trolleys this week in casualty departments because there were no beds.

Many spent more than 24 hours on trolleys awaiting admission, although the winter flu crisis the Government blamed for the beds shortage ended weeks ago.

A snapshot survey of accident and emergency departments which was carried out on Monday by local watchdog bodies found several elderly patients had spent long periods waiting for a bed to become free as hospitals struggled to meet the demand.

A Charing Cross Hospital spokeswoman said four wards have been affected by a gastrointestinal infection and it was difficult to admit patients at the start of the week.

At Epsom General Hospital, researchers found three patients who had waited longer than 24 hours for a bed. One 63-year-old woman had cellulitis, a potentially serious condition where the tissues become inflamed.

Two of the three were later discharged after tests.

A hospital press statement said: "This Monday there was considerable pressure on beds at the hospital due to the number of emergency admissions and the fact that because a high proportion of patients in the hospital were very ill there were fewer discharges than normal."

"All patients received full nursing care and staffing levels were adequate for the numbers concerned."

At Joyce Green Hospital in Dartford a man of 64 suffering from pancreatitis, an acutely painful condition, spent 25 hours on a trolley waiting for a bed.

A hospital spokeswoman said: "It has been an extremely busy week. The week is continuing to be very busy, but everyone is doing the best they can." The latest figures from Casualty Watch, the monthly assessment of trolley waits carried out by members of Community Health Councils, shows there are still delays in many hospitals.

South-west London and Surrey appear to be the worst affected areas, with Epsom General in particular having many long waits.

The figures are at odds with Tony Blair's claim earlier this week that casualty departments across the country were being modernised both by new buildings and new methods of fast-tracking seriously ill patients.

Malcolm Alexander, co-ordinator of Casualty Watch, said: "Ago-nising waits on trolleys are the price paid by the frail, sick and elderly people in the capital's modernised NHS.

"They are the embarrassing evidence of underfunding in the health service and of the Government's failure to ensure that our emergency services can meet the needs of desperately ill people.

"Only beds, doctors and nurses will solve the problem — not telephone helplines."

40 patients 'left on trolleys in one day'

By David Hughes
Political Editor

ABOUR'S claim that the NHS crisis is media-generated was strongly challenged by the Tories yesterday.

They released figures showing that 40 patients in hospital in the London area on one day this week had been left waiting on trolleys for at least eight hours.

The Prime Minister had blamed 'alarmist' press reporting for giving a distorted view of the NHS when he delivered a keynote speech at Thomas's Hospital in South London on Tuesday.

But the figures, produced by Tory health spokesman Liam Fox, reveal that one 82-year-old man had been left for most 37 hours on a trolley at Kingston Hospital in South-West London.

An 83-year-old woman had been waiting for 32 hours on a trolley at Epsom Hospital in Surrey.

A 93-year-old man had been waiting for more than 16 hours on a trolley at Harefield Cross Hospital in West London.

And one patient, a 23-year-old man, had been waiting for more than nine hours on a trolley at Thomas's itself.

The figures are a snapshot of the 'worst 40' trolley waits in the London area at the start of this week. Dr Fox declined to identify the source of the data but claimed the situation would be repeated in health regions across the country.

These figures show how terribly superficial the Prime Minister is,' Dr Fox said.

'He must think the British public are as gullible as his own backbenchers if he thinks we are going to believe that the horrendous problems patients have to endure can simply be dispelled one of his performances in a quality department.'

In the Commons, William Hague

dubbed Mr Blair the 'polaroid Prime Minister' because he 'turns up for photocalls at hospitals but does not listen to what is happening'.

The Tory leader claimed that the Government's waiting list targets were distorting clinical priorities and harming patient care. It was vital that patients who needed treatment most urgently were treated first, Mr Hague told Mr Blair.

'Isn't it time you made sure that clinical priorities were actually dealt with first, otherwise you really will be all mouth and no delivery?' he demanded.

Mr Hague quoted a leaked Department of Health briefing note prepared for a previous Prime Minister's Question Time which showed that at the end of September there were 264,000 more patients waiting over 13 weeks for operations than there were at the end of March 1997.

He accused the Prime Minister of being afraid to read out the facts in the Commons and said that it was time Mr Blair took the blame personally for the lengthening waiting lists.

Mr Blair insisted that the Government was recruiting more doctors, nurses and specialists to ease the problems.

'I believe the principal problem in relation to waiting and heart disease and heart operations is the shortage of cardiac specialists and specialist nurses,' the Prime Minister said.

'That is why we have got now 400 extra cardiac specialists in training and that will deliver by 2005 a 50 per cent increase.' Mr Blair admitted that there were problems which needed sorting out but insisted that the Government was taking action.

He listed 'the £21 billion extra investment, all of the accident and emergency departments being renovated, 37 new hospitals - the largest capital programme ever - 4,000 more nurses, 2,000 more doctors, a 60 per cent increase in cancer specialists, NHS Direct'.

He added: 'That is not to say there aren't still many other problems to be sorted out but we are trying to sort them out.'

'The difference is that we see these problems as a reason for action, while you see them as an excuse for undermining the NHS in principle.'
